Dec 1

I can hardly believe that it's December 1st! But it is! The weather has been mild and looks to be that way for a little while. I'm not unhappy especially since I am not going to FL for my two week family vacation this year due to the Covid-19 explosion and I am not a skier.

Tomorrow we meet for our weekly Coffee and Conversation at 10 am on Zoom. Please join us for good conversation, laughs (sometimes) and nourishing community connection.

I have some sad news to share...Judith Lerner, who attended some study groups and services with us, died the other day. I have been in touch with her family and, as of now, there is nothing more to share about this and when and if there is, I will let you know. May she rest in peace.

Our next service will be Friday evening, December 11th at 5 pm (same Zoom). Polish up your chanukiah, grab your shamas and two additional candles, your Shabbat candles too and get ready to light up Shabbat with our gathering. See you there!!! I can smell the latkes already.

Be well, stay positive, stay safe, and the other side of this nightmare is within reach. Hang in there...

My very best regards, love, Barbara
